There once lived a little red hen, a little mouse, a little pig and a little cat. The little red hen was very clever. The other animals were very lazy.

The little red hen grew the crops in spring and summer, "You do all the work, we are very sleepy," said the other animals.

In winter, the Little Red Hen made some bread, but the other animals only slept and played. When the other animals saw the bread, they helped the Little Red Hen to do some cleaning. And then the Little Red Hen took out the bread and shared the bread with other animals. They were not hungry.

The story teaches us we should not be lazy.
